

ABSTRACT

Computer application having a sequence controller and a user interface, the user interface being produced by showing pages of a markup language, and at least part of the sequence controller being produced by programs which can be embedded in pages of this markup language, and the page containing the sequence controller and the page to be displayed which produces the user interface are separate from one another.